Wreck of the Maine Will Soon Be Uncovered For Inspection

Photos copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

PUMPING has already started, and unless a defect is found in the cofferdam the wreck of the battleship Maine will soon be exposed and possibly the mystery of Havana harbor will be solved. When all the water is pumped out the pressure on the cofferdam will be tremendous, as the depth is more than forty feet. The engineers decided to pump the water out a little at a time and to make frequent stops so that the cofferdam can be inspected and strengthened should any weakness be shown. After the water was lowered each five or six feet it was planned to examine the portion of the wreck exposed and to remove any bodies that might be found. The above pictures give two views of the wreck after the first five feet of water had been pumped out. The cofferdam showed no signs of weakness at that time, and the engineers were confident that the leakage would be negligible.

JURY STILL OUT IN THE WARE-KRAMER DAMAGE SUIT

Probability is That Mistrial Will be Result of Three Weeks Work by Court---Case Went to Jury in Afternoon---Judge Connor's Charge Lengthy.

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, July 12.—The jury in Ware-Kramer Tobacco Company vs. American Tobacco Company suit remained in conference tonight until 10:30 o'clock when they reported inability to reach a verdict tonight and were escorted to a hotel for the night. No indication of how they stand was given. The impression is strong and is growing that the probability is for a mistrial.

Raleigh, July 12.—It required all the forenoon and until 1:30 p. m. today for ex-Gov. Chas. B. Aycock to complete the summing up of the case for the defendants in Ware-Kramer Company versus American Tobacco Company and thereafter the court took a recess to three o'clock when Judge Connor entered upon the delivery of the charge to the jury. This comprised 48 typewritten pages and reviewed the whole scope of the facts and the law in the case. The case was given to the jury late this evening. There are three issues:

1—Have the defendants or either of them and, if yes, which defendant, injured plaintiff corporation in its business or property by making any contract or engaging in any combination in the form of a trust, or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or foreign nations?

2.—Have the defendants or either of them, and if yes, which defendants injured the plaintiff corporation in its business or property by monopolizing or attempting to monopolize or combining or conspiring with any other person or persons to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce among the several state or foreign nations?

3—What damages, if any, has plaintiff sustained.

CITY TO BUILD 6 NEW SCHOOL ROOMS

Plans For Addition to Lindsay Street Building Being Prepared And Work Will Begin at Once—With Increased Room Davie Street Building Will be Vacated.

The city is arranging to build an addition of six rooms to the Lindsay Street school building and the plans will be completed by Saturday. The work will begin at once and the addition completed in time for the fall session. It is estimated that the addition will cost $6,000.

With this building enlarged to double its present size and the room afforded by the removal of the High School students to the new building on Spring street the market house on Davie street and the rooms of the fire companies adjoining will not have to be used for a school. The auditorium in the Lindsay Street school, which for the past year has been subdivided into rooms, will also be opened up.

The Asheboro Street school will also be covered before the beginning of the school term, this work having been put off when the addition was made last year on account of school being in session.

As has been stated before the commissioners have instructed Mayor Murphy to dispose of the $30,000 bond issue for schools, validated at the last session of the legislature, and these will doubtless be thrown upon the market soon. With this sum judiciously expended it is thought that Greensboro will have plenty of school room for several years to come. The commissioners favor having a large grammar school in the central section of the city and then have schools in each of the old wards for the primary grades. In case this is done the smaller children will not have far to walk in order to get to school, no matter in what section of the city they live. Then the larger children in the grammar school would all be together, which would be a great advantage, educators state. At present there are children of all grades in each of the schools.

The building on West Lee street will be used this fall and it is more than probable that when the above mentioned bonds are sold a handsome structure will be erected on this site. Then another school will likely be erected somewhere in the northern section of the city, as the children have to walk a considerable distance at present. When these schools are arranged for the construction of a grammar school will be looked into as the Catholic church building on Lindsay street will have to be vacated in a few years, to say the least.

Moultrie, Ga., July 12.—Will McGriff, the negro who shot and killed William Washington, a white man, and wounded two others, was arrested at Baconton late yesterday afternoon and later killed by a mob estimated at more than 500 men, according to information just received. Before getting out of earshot, he said, the mob fired on the negro.

CONSUMPTION OF WATER DECREASED

Nearly a Hundred Million Gallon Decrease Since Monday Following Passage of Resolution Forbidding Waste—Meter System Will Likely be Adopted.

Commissioner Foushee stated last night that there had been a considerable decrease in the consumption of water since the passage of the resolution calling on the citizens to be more careful with the water and assist in curtailing the expense of pumping it. The day the resolution passed about two and a quarter million gallons were used, necessitating the use of a steam pump in conjunction with the two electric pumps to supply the demand. Yesterday the consumption was about normal, 1,500,000 gallons being used. Commissioner Foushee states that he has plenty of water, but the people are using a good deal more than they are entitled to use, or rather they were before the resolution was passed.

The city is at present considering the use of meters on all consumers and when this is done the abuses of the water will cease. The system of flat rates is most unsatisfactory to both the city and consumer as some people with one fixture use more water than others with several fixtures use, making unequal rates. The meter system would abolish this and each consumer would pay so much for every gallon of water he used.

In Charlotte where they have the meter system they have double the number of taps that Greensboro has, yet they use considerably less water. A small leak makes a consumer's bill double up and consequently it is made certain by each consumer that he has no leaks. In Greensboro it matters not and consumers allow thousands of gallons of water to run away without giving it a thought just because it does not cost anything.

Runaway Locomotive Follows Engineer Into a Restaurant

THIS happened in Philadelphia. Charlie Rhoades, an engine driver on the Philadelphia and Reading, brought his train to the city from Bethlehem and then backed out of the terminal station and to the roundhouse. The huge camel back engine, known to the railroad men as "Big Pete," was run on to the turntable, which was swung around until the engine could be run on to the track where it rests between trips. Then Rhoades left the engine while he went to a restaurant across the street for his breakfast. Whether the hostlers were too slow in attending to the wants of "Big Pete" or whether the camel back became suspicious that his master was getting more than simply ham and eggs has not been fully explained. "Big Pete" puffed and snorted uneasily in his berth while waiting for his morning portion, but without warning, and to the consternation of his companions about him, started down the track and across the street for the little restaurant where Master Charlie had just drained his second cup of coffee. Luckily the turntable had not been moved since "Big Pete" had backed off it a few minutes before or the big engine would have landed in the pit, and it would have been a case of "to the hospital for repairs." The big board fence just beyond had no terrors for the big monster, and it came down as does the paper over the circus rider's hoop. The crash, however, roused Charlie, the master, to action, and he rushed to the door to see what was the trouble with "Big Pete." The latter, probably thinking Charlie was going in next door for his morning smoke, swerved from his path as though to join him in the cigar store at 31d. No one was hurt, and the engine was but slightly damaged. The cigar store and the restaurant were badly damaged, and Green street was blocked to traffic for some little time until the wrecking crews got to work and hauled "Big Pete" back into the yards.

LA FOLETTE'S AMENDMENT TO THE RECIPROCITY BILL

Wisconsin Senator Would Revise The Cotton And Woolen Schedules of The Bill--Provides For Greater Duty Than Necessary to Protect Home Industries.

Washington, July 12.—Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, introduced in the Senate today his much talked of amendment to the reciprocity bill. The amendment relates to the cotton and woolen schedules of the bill. In introducing his amendment Mr. LaFollette made the following statement:

"If it were possible to postpone the putting of the Canadian reciprocity bill into effect until after Congress could have opportunity to act upon the report which the tariff board will make after its investigation of the cost of wool and cotton I would not urge a partial revision of these schedules. But if we are to have free trade in agricultural products with a compensation to the farmers then in fairness to all consumers the partial reduction proposed in scheduled I and K should be made to go into effect at the same time as the Canadian bill."

Mr. LaFollette said his amendment provides a greater duty than is necessary to protect our manufacturers from European competition. The duty on clothing is fixed at 40 per cent, wool 40 per cent., carpet wool 10 per cent., on yarns 50 per cent, on carpets 40 per cent.; on cloths and other manufacturers composed entirely of wool 60 per cent. Mr. La Follette said the effect of these proposed changes to the consumers of the country is of the utmost importance. The proposed reduction of duty under the cotton schedule is 20 per cent. or a reduction to the consumer upon cotton alone of $196,000,000 annually. On the woolen schedule he said the consumers would save $172,000,000. The estimated loss to the government in revenues would be in the neighborhood of $30,000,000 annually, he said.

MAKING WAR ON THE HOUSE FLIES

The campaign against flies is one in which a number of people refuse to engage. They do not appear to understand that flies are a nuisance, a pest and that they are useless as well as dangerous. It is therefore, difficult to organize in any town or city a systematic movement for the eradication of flies. Many people look upon those who speak and work to this end as fadists or cranks; but it is a fact that those who are laboring to spread information about the dangers arising from the fly pest and striving to wipe out the nuisance, are performing signal service for the public welfare. Education in this case, as well as in all similar cases, is necessary; and when the people as a whole become sufficiently informed they will recognize the dangers arising from flies and will be willing to take the steps necessary in the first place, to prevent the multiplication of the pests, and in the second place to take steps for the destruction of those coming into existence. The Baltimore Sun discusses the beginning of the anti-fly crusade in that city in a hopeful spirit, while admitting that many people are indifferent to efforts in this direction, although there may be no real hostility manifested toward anti-fly campaigns. The Sun says:

"Dr. Clifton F. Hodge of the Johns Hopkins Summer School, who is about to launch a crusade against the house fly in Baltimore, must prepare himself to face, not only the apathy of the plain people, but also the slings and arrows of their official wits. When George Stewart Brown, then a member of the City Council, first besought that learned and honorable body to take offensive measures against the mosquito, he was greeted, if we remember rightly, by loud and hearty guffaws, and it was only after a long campaign and in the face of much jocosity that his plan began to take form. And yet the damage that the mosquito was doing to Baltimore was obvious to any intelligent man, and the benefits to be derived from its extermination had been made dramatically apparent by experience in many places, from Porto Rico to the Philippines, and from the lowlands of India to the Roman campagna.

"The house-fly, no doubt, will also have ignorance and cheap wit upon its side. To many persons the extinction of this pestiferous and dangerous insect seems a mere vision of hobby-riders and fanatics. The fly has existed since the dawn of history; man has faced its so-called assaults for ages and yet lived to tell the tale. Besides, it is innumerable and omnipresent and the labor of disposing of it would daunt a Hercules. Yet reflection will show that other pests, some of them just as numerous and apparently just as well fortified, have been driven out of all civilized places. Time was when the pediculidae were as familiar to white men as they are today to the blacks of Zambesia and the Mongols of Turkestan, but now their propagation among us has been definitely abandoned, and any attempt to prove them necessary or inevitable, even if made on the floor of the City Council, would not receive much consideration.

"In the same way, no doubt, the house-fly will go. It is one of the few insects that have no visible usefulness whatever. The bee serves a good purpose, the thousand-leg helps us as much as it scares us, and even the moth, perhaps, may be defended. But the fly is our incorrigible and unmitigated enemy—an annoying pest at best and a carrier of great plagues at worst. Let Dr. Hodge cling bravely to his jehad. He will be an old, old man before the last fly disappears from Baltimore, but meanwhile it should comfort him to reflect that he is engaged in a serious and worthy enterprise, and one that is bound to be successful soon or late and sure to pay large dividends to humanity."

The dustless oiled streets are fine.

Dust is as obnoxious and as dangerous as flies. Therefore, dustless streets are greatly to be desired.

Express rates are to be lowered, it is said. No doubt this is an effort to forestall the inauguration of the parcels post.

"Taft Diminishes," says a headline in the Norfolk Landmark. Perhaps the fat President is melting during this hot weather.

If all the streets of the city were oiled the water supply would not be the subject of so much anxiety and discussion in times of drought.

We do not know the opinion of the "oldest inhabitant" but the concensus of opinion of inhabitants of all ages is that this is the hottest and dryest summer this country has witnessed in many years.

Some of the finest fiction being published nowadays is given out by the weather clerks who are predicting the breaking of the backbone of the heat wave.

Electric fans have been placed in the United States Senate chamber. The fans will add greatly to the volume of wind daily in motion in the chamber, but it is not believed they will be able to compete with the Senators in putting air in motion.

Down in Georgia they believe in recognizing the plain people. They elected a man named Brown to the governorship and then proceeded to elect a governor named Smith at the next election. Now Smith is going to the United States Senate.

Most of the Democratic Senators and Congressmen are willing to stand upon their party's platform, and those who are not are no particular credit to the party. The Senator or Congressman who cannot honestly stand on the Democratic platform ought to be honest enough to call himself an independent or Republican and not try to masquerade as a Democrat.

The oil placed on the city streets is at first troublesome on account of the fact that it adheres to any vehicle passing over the street and sticks to the feet of pedestrians. This has been the experience of the people of this city. However The Telegram believes it will be found that this is true only when the streets are first oiled. After a few days or a few weeks at most, this trouble will disappear.

Senator Bailey spoke three hours in the Senate Tuesday against the reciprocity bill, admitting that he was speaking merely to prevent and delay the passage of the measure. That is a fair specimen of the tactics used in Congress to kill legislation the people want, and the people have to pay for it, not only by frequently failing to get the legislation desired but also by having to foot the bills for unnecessary sessions of Congress and for time wasted at regular sessions.

The Commissioners will find the solution of their troubles with the water supply to be the installation of meters. So long as there is no limit to the amount of water a purchaser of water may use, many people are going to waste the fluid. If everybody had to pay by the gallon for the water used, everybody would practice economy in using water. The Telegram favors meters and reasonable rates. On this basis the bill of the average water consumer would be less than at present, while those persons who now waste water could buy all the water they actually needed without any increase in their water rate. The meter system solves the water waste problem and is the only system that will do it. If water must be sold the only reasonable and businesslike basis on which to conduct the sale is at a fixed price per gallon, or hundred or thousand gallons.

The new railroad will aid greatly in the development of Greensboro and the section of country between this city and Henderson. In fact, in a large section of country not now directly accessible to railroads and much in need of an outlet for products, the benefits will be larger than in the case of this city. The leading business men of Burlington, Graham, Roxboro, Oxford and Henderson realize that a new railroad connecting with this city would help their towns and the entire section of country contiguous to these towns. The people of the country districts through which it is proposed to build the road are likewise very favorably impressed with the proposition, and the result is unanimity of opinion among the people in towns and country who would be directly interested in the road. This means that a large proportion of the people of Guilford, Alamance, Person, Caswell, Granville and Vance are going to get behind this movement when it is fully inaugurated and help to b uild the road.

North Carolina Getting Bigger.

Dealers in real estate, when they go to sell property have a way of saying to the prospective customer, "Buy land. If you buy something else there can be plenty more of it, but if you buy land, you have bought something that is staple. The Lord isn't making any more land. There is no more land today than there was a million years ago. Therefore if you buy land, you have got something that is staple and it is the best investment you can make."

It seems that this is not always true. There had been no change in the boundary lines of Guilford county in twenty years, and yet in 1908, when Auditor Abbott got to work on the tax books of Guilford county, he found that there were 13,127 acres of land in that county that had not been put on the tax list. Therefore, the authorities of that county for the purpose of taxation had made 13,127 acres of land. There was published in the News and Observer Sunday that County Assessor of Johnston county, who had given sixty full days to driving over Johnston county and helping to assess the land by viewing it, had found that, though there had been no change in the boundary line of Johnston county, somebody had made 14,385 acres of new land since the last assessment. At least, he put that much more land on the books than was on there last year.

If authorities of other counties would do their duty and put all the land on the tax books, and that should not be difficult to do, the number of acres of land in every county would be stationary, for there is no new land made except now and then a few acres on the seashore by the drifting of the sand.

If we have two counties in North Carolina in the last three years added 27,000 acres of land on the tax books, how much more land in the other ninety-eight counties is skipping taxation? In how many other counties have the authorities discovered new land and put it on the tax books this year? It would be interesting if the county assessors in every county would make a statement showing what has been done in this direction.—Raleigh News and Observer.

The Engagement Ring

(By JOHN WATSON WHYTE.)

It is a grand moment for both the girl and the man when he slips the little gold and jeweled circle round the third finger. It means so much to both of them—perhaps even more to the girl than to the man, because her sex sets greater store by the ring that binds, and she has more sentiment. And, moreover, although the couple may have been mutually engaged without a ring, that small emblem of a plighted troth becomes very sacred to a girl. A very, very great deal must happen before either she returns it or her sweetheart demands it back.

It is very natural that a girl should be very proud of her engagement ring, but she should be careful not to make it too obtrusive. Even her best friends will get weary of her continual "Oh, isn't it a beautiful ring—and isn't he perfect?" The praise of a sweetheart, and his token of promise, is all very well in moderation, but it can be, and often is, carried to excess.

A girl can be just as proud and delighted with her ring by a quiet pride and joy as by continually demonstrating her pleasure before her friends.

Nor is it good taste for a man to ask his and his sweetheart's acquaintances how they like the ring. They are bound to say it meets their entire approval, whether they think so or not. Courtesy cannot demand otherwise.

With regard to the ring, so it is with other little things during the happy days of courtship. An engaged couple should be careful not to sing one another's praises too much to their relatives, friends and acquaintances. Let people find out for themselves the sterling qualities of both. Real friends will be quick enough to appreciate their good points, but an engaged couple may rest assured—and eat it with humble pie—that real true friends will find out faults in them that are entirely unsuspected by the owners. But this need not trouble sweethearts. Everyone knows that it is often the case that it is because of people's faults that they are dear to us.

"I ran across a remarkable jeu d'esprit the other day," said a casual acquaintance, trying to be entertaining. "I'm sorry," replied the wealthy man to whom he was speaking, "but my wife has just returned from Europe with a lot of art treasures, and I shouldn't have any place to hang it even if I bought it!"

FARM DEMONSTRATION WORK

(C. R. HUDSON IN PROGRESSIVE FARMER.)

The Farmers' Co-Operative Demonstration Work was started in North Carolina late in the fall of 1907 in the eight counties of Catawba, Lincoln, Gaston, Mecklenburg, Union, Cabarrus, Rowan and Iredell. The results of the first season's work have already been published. During the season just passed, 1909-1910, the work was extended to 32 counties, making a total of 40.

This movement is a mode of carrying the best methods of agriculture to the various farms throughout the territory where the work is prosecuted. A successful and influential local farmer is selected for the purpose. It is not the purpose of the movement as stated by its management, to make the largest yields possible at a great expense and probable detriment to the soil, but to make large yields at as low cost as is consistent with good farming. It is designed to demonstrate the value of such methods of farming as double the yield and halve the cost of production. Its aim is the permanent building up of the soil so that it will produce a profitable crop every year, rather than the making of an occasional large but expensive crop by the use of commercial fertilizers. Much attention is given to seed selection and to proper methods of cultivation. While not neglecting the growing of cotton and the best methods of handling the soil for other crops, more attention is paid to the growing of corn in this State for the reason that corn growing has been largely neglected here.

County Agents and their Work.

It is not intended to make here a comparison of the efficiency of the work done by the 40 county agents engaged in the work the past season. They have all done well, and they deserve much credit for their energy, enthusiasm and optimism; for their interest in the agricultural welfare of their respective counties, and for their loyalty to the work. They have talked good preparation, good seed, good cultivation, good implements, good records, etc., and have induced several hundred farmers in each county to use them. By going to the men on their farms and seeing the conditions under which the work is to be done, the supervisor is enabled to give proper advice. Without knowing conditions, his advice might be largely guesswork. It is this personal contact and regular visitation that makes the work practical and secures results.

These men, all practical farmers, have personally supervised 4,359 acres of corn and 2,792 acres of cotton, or an average of 105 acres of corn and 70 acres of cotton per man the past season. This is an average of nearly three acres for each demonstration. They have put on the mailing list of the United States Department of Agriculture about 5,000 names of farmers who are interested in better farming. They have kept 2,500 records of crop productions and have come into direct contact with over 5,000 farmers upon whom they impressed the need of more progressive agriculture.

The demonstrators made, on an average, a fraction less than 41 bushels of corn per acre, and 1.238 pounds of seed cotton. The averages under ordinary methods in the same communities were 18 bushels of corn and 741 pounds of seed cotton. The averages for the State were 18.6 bushels of corn and 681 pounds seed cotton. The averages for corn for 1908 were 37 bushels for the demonstration farms and 18 bushels for the State. While the State in 1909 lost one and one-fifth bushels per acre over the previous year, the demonstration farms gained over three bushels per acre.

Cost of Production of Crop.

There are so many things entering into the production of crops that it is exceedingly difficult to arrive at a satisfactory basis upon which to figure the cost. Conditions often vary among farms in the same county, and even on the same farm from year to year. However, by figuring things upon the basis of the farmer who owns no land or stock and who does not work himself, we believe we approximate very closely the actual cost of production. At present we allow $1 per day for the labor of a man, 50 cents for a horse, $2 for a two-horse load of stable and lot manure, market price for commercial fertilizers, $8 net per ton for corn stover, and $1 per bushel for corn. This price for corn usually prevails at some time during the season. Last year, in spite of the biggest crop ever made in the State, corn sold as high as $1 per bushel. As to rental value of land, we have fixed the arbitrary one of $5 per acre. This is considerably above the average price paid, but many farmers object to charging so little for land on which big yields are reported. But it must be remembered that much of the land that has made from 40 to 60 bushels per acre under demonstration work, had never produced more than from 15 to 20 bushels before. Again, a great many farms may be rented for half the price named.

Two men, with a double team, can easily gather and put into the crib four loads, or 80 bushels, of corn per day. This amounts to less than 5 cents per bushel, the price used in these calculations. Those who object to any figures used herein, may substitute others of a more local nature, and thus figure out the cost of their individual corn crops. Nothing has been allowed in our calculations for peas grown among the corn. Peas often produce a net profit of from $4 to $6 per acre when putting the price at $2 per bushel. The vines are worth from $10 to $12 for forage. The nitrogen stored in the soil varies from, say 20 to 30 pounds per acre, worth about 18 cents per pound. The total net profit from an acre of peas will vary from $10 to $20, which, of course, the wise farmer figures in his transactions.

While a number of farmers have had their best land in demonstration work, yet the rule has been in locating these fields to secure land of average fertility and such as is as nearly as possible representative of the soil on the whole farm. Many of the demonstrations were located on very thin and ordinarily unproductive soils.

The detailed record here given illustrates the methods used in obtaining the cost of corn crops:

Some Lessons From Demonstrators' Reports.

From 50 such records we have an average as follows: Depth of breaking, 8½ inches; stable manure, $4.75; commercial fertilizers, $5.85; yield per acre, 71 bushels; net cost per acre, $5.10.

From the same records we find that those who broke their soils in November December or January, and used $12.55 worth of stable manure and fertilizers, made a profit of $8.88 more than those who used $8.60 worth of combined fertilizers, but broke their soils later in the season.

Those who used stable manure ($5.87 per acre) in addition to commercial fertilizers, made a profit of $7.70 more than those who depended upon commercial fertilizers alone. That is, each dollar's worth of stable manure used made a profit of $1.26, or 126 per cent. No account is taken of the after effects of stable manure. These, of course, are much greater than those of commercial fertilizers was practically the same in the two cases.

Those who broke their soils an average of 9 inches deep, using $8.84 worth of fertilizers, made a profit of $13.51 more than those who broke their soil an average of 4½ inches deep and used $6.92 worth of fertilizers. That is to say, deep breaking and $1.92 worth of fertilizers increased the profit by $13.51 per acre.

Allowing a profit of 126 per cent on fertilizers, as stated above, we find that deep breaking increased the profit $11.10 per acre. The increase in yield was 17 bushels per acre.

Taking those records in which commercial fertilizer only was used, we find that those who broke 9 inches deep and used $5.75 worth of fertilizers per acre made a profit of $8.98 per acre more than those who broke 4½ inches deep and used $6.92 worth of fertilizer.

Practically all of the men in the work used improved seed. These increased their yields from 10 to 50 per cent.

More Funds Needed.

The funds appropriated for demonstration work are entirely inadequate to meet the demands for the work. A number of counties procured the work this season by appropriating $300 each, thus securing a similar amount through the United States Department of Agriculture. This is money well spent for the practical teaching of agriculture. Three hundred bushels more of corn than previously. If 50 such enter the work, that will increase the yield in the county 5,000 bushels. (The average number per county last season was 47). This, of course, pays the cost several times over. Furthermore, the good methods will continue in operation after demonstration work has stopped and will continue to spread.

The work will probably be extended to a number of other counties next season. As a rule, the counties that show the most interest in the work are given the preference, provided they take up the matter with the management in time.

Leave Off The "Re"

(By CARA REESE.)

Leave off the "re" and there is but little difference. One is a "retired" personage abundantly blessed with this world's goods and the other is a "tired" personage on whom likewise there has been a showering and dowering. The gulf is not as wide as it seems, merely the width of two letters.

There is a proneness to magnify the width of the chasm between the retired and the tired and with small attempt to bridge over the same. And yet the locations are somewhat interchangeable. There are retired individuals who are woefully tired amid their comforts and leisure surroundings, and there are tired ones who are retired so effectually that they have not a single care save that of making ends meet. Hence there is a hope somewhat forlorn, that the retired and tired may some day get together, shake hands and indulge in reminiscences. Next, an autobiography with viewpoints for the public.

Neither the retired nor the tired are overly interested in the public welfare. The tired is supposed to blame public welfare or existing conditions for the weary state in which he finds himself, while the retired is practically a graduate from the tired class and has all he can do to manage the cap and gown of high estate and maintain a tranquil aloofness from undergraduate. In later years, however, both the retired and the tired have been known to clasp hands as friends and brothers, and with joint interest in the public weal.

The real idea is this: There is not as great a gulf fixed between one plane of life and another as people sometimes imagine. There is ever a glamour over that from which the other is denied. The retired has longed for the sleep and repose of the tired; the tired has yearned for the abundance of the retired. There have been longing looks toward the radiance of wealth, and cold noses pressed against the window panes of comfort, and hungry desires for the plenty. And yet in such cases where fulfillment comes the realization has rarely met expectations. Very few people except Theosophists are made over or perfected in their advance from plane to plane.

There is only the width of two letters on the alphabet between the retired and the tired. The retired and the tired are near enough at all times to reach out and shake hands. The danger lies in becoming so far retired as to lose sight and touch of the throbbing interests of real life and to be out of reach of vital questions and conditions. Or, to become so tired and fagged by long hours of unremunerative effort, that there is small thought given as to whether the world at large be asleep or awake. The mind and body that know no leisure are tired, indeed. But cheer up, everybody. The difference is slight between the retired and tired; change places occasionally.

John Henry Gets Busy

By GEORGE V. HOBART

We were a half-hour early for my engagement with Signor Petroskinski when Bunch and I strolled into the cafe of the Hotel Astor.

"Bunch," I said, when the waiter had forced a confession from us, "there's doings out home. Clara J. tipped me off last night that I must hand over my five thousand plunks to be properly invested by the mayor of Ruraldene."

"Uncle Peter!" chuckled Bunch.

"Now I can't tip my hand to the old gentleman and have him lecture me all over the place, can I, Bunch?"

"Not unless you want your wife to know that you sprained your promise."

"Then it's up to me to press the button and start my get-rich-quick concern," I said. "I simply can't go home and hand them a sad drool about being coaxed into the street and being trimmed for my coin—nix! The only thing to do is to go out and get it back, and get it quick, eh, Bunch?"

"You bet, John," Bunch agreed. "I spent last evening with Alice and I felt like phony money all the time. She's going right ahead with the wedding preparations and I simply hadn't the nerve to tell her that I lost nearly every penny I had. Uncle William Grey tiptoed into the parlor for a few moments and began to congratulate me on the good reports he had had from Alice with regard to my ability to save a bit of money. I could feel myself shriveling up as he talked and the parlor began to turn around and start for the Saratoga track."

"I know the feeling," I said earnestly. "There was a time, Bunch, that whenever my wife mentioned the word money to me I could see a horse come into the room and shake his mane at me."

"And then," Bunch continued, "Uncle William said to me, 'Jefferson, my son, Alice tells me you've already saved up five thousand, and I'm proud of you. I didn't like you at first, because I thought you were a harum scarum like your friend, John Henry; but now that you've developed such manly traits of character I'm going to take four thousand of your money, put the same amount in for Alice, and start you in business.' Say, John, I wanted to go through the parlor floor and on through the earth and then out through the busiest ambuscade in Mexico, and let an insurrecto bullet knock my silly head off."

"We're both up against it for fair," I said; "and we'll have to get in the ice-cutting business right away. As I told you, this Signor Petroskinski is the marvel of the age, and we can simply coin money with him. Two thousand dollars will start the driving wheels—gi' me your thousand and I'll put it with mine."

Bunch dug out his last bundle of big bills and I gave him the partnership articles I had framed up.

"We'll open up in New Rochelle," I said, "next Thursday night. Charlie Osgood is a friend of mine and he's laid out a gilt-edged route for me. Mamaroneck Friday night, and then into Cos Cob for Saturday matinee and night."

"That doesn't sound like a glad hosannah to me!" Bunch grumbled.

"What, Cos Cob!" I answered. "It's aces. Charlie Osgood says Cos Cob is a great Saturday night town because it's pay-day at the gas works. From there we jump to Green's Farms for the Monday night show."

"Is that place really on the map?" Bunch asked.

"Sure it is," I said. "Charlie says it's a good Monday night town because two through freights lay over there till daylight. Tuesday night we have to double back to Greenwich, and that's where Charlie gave us the bum deal. This gag of chasing us back over the same route is rotten, because somebody may be sitting up for us with a rock. But Charlie says Greenwich has developed into a great show town since five new families moved there last summer. Wednesday we get into Stamford for a run—two performances. Friday we are booked at South Norwalk and Saturday we play matinee and night at Saugatuck Junction. Charlie says Saugatuck is a cinch money-maker because it's a junction. When I asked him what there is about a junction that makes it a safe play Charlie excused himself and went to lunch. After Saugatuck we are not booked, because Charlie says something may fall down in New York and he may want to yank us right in. And, say, if Signor Petroskinski, the illusionist and worker of mystical magic, ever gets a crack at a Broadway audience it'll be a case of us matching John D. Rockefeller to see who has the most money."

"No, we better not bring Skinski into New York," Bunch advised. "I'm afraid of the critics."

"What critics?" I inquired. "There are only four people in New York city who can write criticisms—the rest of the bunch are slush-dealers, and a knock from any one of them is a boost."

"I mean Mr. Stale," Bunch put in. "If he were to roast our Skinski it might hurt our business."

"It would—among the Swedes and Hungarians," I cross-countered. "I'm wise to Mr. Stale, nee Cohenheimer, the human harpoon! Say, Bunch! he's a joke. I caught him the day he first left the blacksmith shop, some ten years ago, with a boathook in each hand and a toasting fork between his teeth. That duck isn't a critic, he's only a Foofoo."

"What the devil is a Foofoo?" Bunch asked.

"A Foofoo is something that tried to happen and then lost the address," I explained. "Did you ever pipe Stale's cheery bits of humor as exemplified in one of his burning criticisms? Well, I'll put you wise, Bunch:

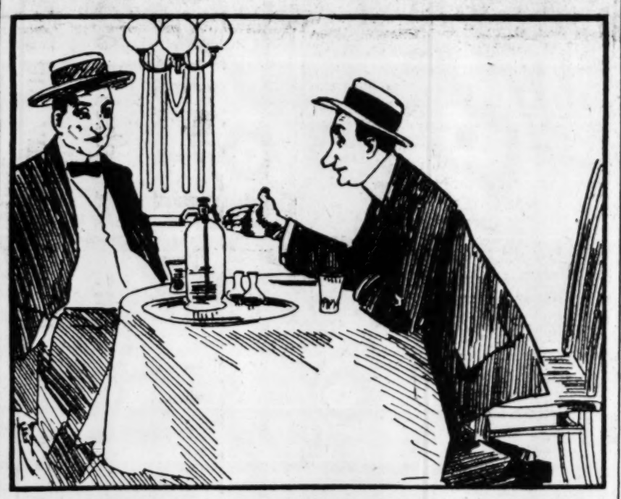
"I went to the Kookoo theater last night, I and myself. Voila! tout bien! I have seen lots of shows before, I have, but I have never, I solemnly declare, seen any show so utterly banal as this. The libretto was written by some obscure person who never reads my criticisms for if he did he would know that I abhor Dutch dialect. One reason I hate it so much is that some people can write it so well that they make more money than I do writing English undefiled—oh! the shame of it! Voila! tout suite! But to return to our muttons, as we say in Paris whenever I go there. Tottie Coughdrop played the principal part, but a merciful Providence gave me a cold in the head so I couldn't hear what she said! Voila! tout fromage de Brie! To my mind Tottie looked like one of yesterday's ham sandwiches, and a 'gent' sitting near me said she was all to the mustard, so you see great minds run in the same channel—oh! la, la, la! But to return to our muttons. The show is said to have cost $25,000, but what care I? Voila! tout coalscuttle! I'd roast it if it cost $50,000, otherwise how could I make good? Voila! tout blatherskite! But to return to our muttons. I went out after the first act and never did go back—great joke on the show, wasn't it? Oh! la, la, la! Still I insist that Tottie Coughdrop looked like a ham sandwich. Voila! tout fudge!"

"So that's the kind of piffle that managers and actors have to go up against," laughed Bunch.

"They don't go up against it any more, Bunch," I said. "They are shifty young guys in the theatrical business nowadays, and they sidestep the hammer-throwers. Mr. Stale is a back number and his harpoon can't stop a dollar bill from fluttering into any man's box office."

"He thinks he can, all right," Bunch muttered.

"Well, there are two thinks and a half still due him," I said. "Who ever gave that guy a license to splash ink all over a production and hold actors, weighs 295 pounds and she was immense.



"That Duck Isn't a Critic, He's Only a Foofoo."

authors and managers up to ridicule?"

"I thought Stale used to write books," Bunch put in.

"He thought so, too, but the public passed him the ice pitcher," I said. "He started in to be a successful author and then he bit his tongue."

"He'll get after you good and hard if he hears you talking this way," Bunch admonished.

"Say! Bunch! he's been after me for five years and he hasn't caught up with me yet. Every time he's had a chance he's tossed a few sneers in my direction, so I made up my mind the other day I'd coax him down to the foundry and throw the anvil at him. If ever I do get loose on that Birmingham goat he'll think he has swallowed one of his own harpoons. He's a case of Perpetual Grouch because it gets the dough for him on pay-day.

"If somebody ever steals his hammer he'll be doing hotfoots for the handout thing and he'll eat about once a week.

"It's a brave and glorious spectacle, isn't it, Bunch, to watch this mouldy writer throwing his hooks into actors and actresses who haven't a chance on earth to get back."

"I'd hate to have to make my living by trying to drag the bread and butter away from other people," Bunch butted in.

"Jefferson, My Boy, I'm Proud of You."

"Yes, and the nickel-plated nerve that goes with it," I went on. "Every time this Stale guy goes to a theater he makes it appear that he was forced into a den of thieves and everybody he can point out with his fountain pen is either a criminal or a dirty deuce. What has he ever done that finished one, two, nine?"

"He's been fourflushing around for years about the pitiful condition of the 'drammer,' but did he ever write a play that saw the light of day? Nix.

"I'll bet eight dollars if he ever does get a play produced there'll be nobody left in the theater but the ushers and the spot light after the first act."

"Lots of people think he is very clever," Bunch suggested.

"So is a trained goat," I came back. "If you stood a crowd of handcuffed actors and authors and managers up in a corner and made faces at them and called them names and blew spitballs in their eyes you could get a laugh from the low foreheads, couldn't you, Bunch?"

"Surest thing you know, John."

"Well, that's Grouchy Stale's line of endeavor. Say, Bunch, if it were not for the knocks contained therein one of that guy's essays would read like the maiden effort of a lovesick jellyfish.

"Did you ever pipe the pure and lofty and highly ennobling sentiments, the spiritually beautiful inspiration which characterizes that book of his—that deft little dip into degeneracy—something about a frozen wedding! Oh, slush! Percy, pass the cigarettes!"

"That windy stuff Stale hands out is supposed to be criticism, Bunch, but it isn't—it's typewritten egotism."

"Yes, but it's useless for you to go after him, John; he'll only hand you another javelin."

"Well, the next time that dub throws the gaff into me I'll know he has a reason for it. Hereafter, every time he bats an eye in my direction it's me for a swift get-back, I'll tell you those!"

"You should bear the ills of the flesh with Christian fortitude," grinned Bunch.

"Nix," I said. "I'm tired holding up something fat for a mutt like that to paddle with a slapstick!"

Advertising Cuba.

One of the valuable things the Cubans have learned from the Americans is the art of advertising, and as is sometimes the case the likely pupil goes his tutor one better. Not only will the Cuban government be officially and diplomatically represented at the coronation of King George in London, but the special envoys from Havana will have a double mission to fill. They are going to act as official advertising agents for their country. They will carry with them to England 6,000 of the finest cigars that can be manufactured anywhere in the world, to be presented to King George with the compliments of the Cuban people. As a Havana newspaper says, "the cigars are being taken to remind the British ruler of the fact that Cuba puts out the best cigars."

MOUSSELINE DE SOIE WAIST

With Square Plastron of White Lace and Bordered With Beaded Embroidery Makes Pretty Effect.

This waist is of pale blue mousseline de soie with square plastron of white lace, bordered with a beaded embroidery. It is trimmed around the neck with embroidery, lace and black velvet.

The undersleeves are of lace, the girdle is of black velvet or satin.

Lingerie Cushions.

The pillow cushion in tapestry or fine lawn and embroidery is proving very popular. Some of the lawn designs are exquisitely embroidered by hand and inset with lace motifs, while the tapestry and brocade designs are simply made with a plain edging in cord in the color which predominates in the material.

Broderie anglaise adorns some of the pillow-shaped cushions, with flat edgings of lace as a finish. When used in the bedroom, cushions of this kind are accompanied by handkerchief sachets, nightdress cases, glove cases, etc., made to match.

Baby's Sleeves.

Most mothers tie up their baby's sleeves with ribbon. A prettier way (and one that saves the trouble of ironing out the ribbons) is to purchase two small strings of white or gilt beads and two medium-sized pearl buttons. Fasten one button on each sleeve, slip a string of beads over it, and fasten at the shoulder with a baby pin. The effect is charming—and it costs about 25 cents, altogether.

Mistook Snake for Whip.

George Deady, a farm hand living in Wilsonville, had a hot time on Friday and he fainted dead away from fright, says a Putnam correspondent of the Hartford Courant. Deady picked up what he thought was the tip of a horse whip in the grass beside the road, only to find that the horse whip was alive. It proved to be a black snake. It wound around Deady's arm and poked its head in Deady's face and grinned at him.

Deady let out a yell that could be heard all over Wilsonville and ran to Henry Pearl and implored him to pull the snake off his arm. Pearl refused to meddle, saying he was no snake charmer, whereupon Deady fainted in the road. Pearl says the snake then uncoiled, and wiggled off into the bushes. It was about five feet long.

At the Celestial Gate.

The druggist approached the Celestial gate. St. Peter opened the portal for him and bade him enter and join the heavenly choir.

"Not so fast," admonished the compounder of pills. "Before I go in there I want to ask a few questions. Have you any city directories in Paradise?"

"No," replied St. Peter.

"Any remedies for growing hair on bald heads and door knobs?"

"None."

"Any soda fountains?"

"We don't know what they are."

"Do you sell stamps?"

"We don't use them here."

"And last, but not least, have you any telephones?"

"We have not."

"Then I'll go in, for I guess this is Heaven all right, all right."—Louisville Post.

Primitive Canadian College.

A great institution in embryo is the remarkable Emanuel college at Saskatoon, in the diocese of Saskatchewan. At the present time sixty young men are being trained there under Principal Lloyd to meet the rapidly growing demand for young clergymen in the vast territory of westeren Canada. A picture of this college shows a lot of wooden huts of the simplest species, standing on the open prairie. Two tutors live in shacks also. The men have nowhere to sit except in the lecture rooms or in their bunks.

"Brown was terribly annoyed yesterday. He took his girl to the baseball game."

"And she bored him with questions, I presume?"

"Not at all. When one of the players started to steal second, she got up and yelled: 'Slide, slide, you big dub!'"—Detroit Free Press.

UNCLE CAL GOOD REASONER

Fired Question at Camp Fire Astronomer That Probably Was Hard to Answer.

"The late George Cary Eggleston was in the Confederate army," said a New York editor, "and, as Memorial day approached, he would narrate at the Authors' club many a memory of war times.

"I liked to hear his yarns about the child-like minds of slaves. He once told me, for example, about a grizzled slave named Uncle Cal, body servant to his colonel.

"As Eggleston sat before a camp fire one coolish autumn evening, watching Uncle Cal mend the colonel's coat, the crimson and gold glory of the autumn sunset turned the talk to astronomy, and Eggleston said:

"'You see, Uncle Cal, the world is round, like an apple, and it goes round, too—round and round it goes all the time.'

"'Hit's round an' hit goes round,' said Uncle Cal, skeptically. 'But what I want to know is, what holds it up?'

"'Why, you see, Uncle Cal,' said Eggleston, 'the world goes round the sun, and the sun holds it up—by attraction, you know.'

"Uncle Cal glanced from his coat mending to Eggleston with a patronizing smile.

"'Honey,' he said, 'Ah reckon yo' hain't gone far 'nough in you' reasonin'. Fo', if yo' surmisation wuz correct, what would keep de world up when the sun went down? Answer me dat, hon!'"

Cat Makes Home in Church.

A black cat has made a home for herself and family beneath the organ in St. Paul's church, London, and all efforts to dislodge her have failed. The cat has been in the habit of attending church for the past two or three months. Occasionally she appeared at Sunday worship, but was more frequently in the habit of slipping in on week days when the caretaker was busy. Time and again the cat has been sefit away, but now that she has a family to look after the difficulties of eviction are increased. Evidently she prefers the comfort of the church to a precarious existence out of doors, and troubles little that she and her nursery might cause a dislocation in the mechanism of the organ.

COTTON LETTER TO J. E. LATHAM.

New Orleans, La., July 12.—Liverpool came in strong on old crops and shows spot prices there 7.82, sales 10,000 bales, but was poor on new crops on reports of rain from northwest Texas and Oklahoma. The map shows cloudy weather over nearly the entire belt, scattered showers, more general in the central and eastern States. Indications are for continued unsettled, showery weather with a cool wave for the northwestern quarter of the belt. Detailed reports show a rainfall as follows: Houston, .14; Galveston, .04; Nacogdcohes, .60; and three stations out of eleven in Oklahoma with an average of .40. Heavy rains are rather frequent in the central States and give rise to complaints as they have lasted over two weeks. Houston received today 71 bales, of which 56 were new, making 97 new to date, against 6 last year. North Carolina had some rain over night, but not enough to relieve the drought. The market lost about ten points around the opening but greater firmness in July and August in New York had a steadying effect. Support in new crops is not prominent. On the other hand selling seems to be held in check until the prospects for more rain in the Western States becomes a fact.

Have you found out what interesting news is contained in the want page? There is a reason why want ads are interesting to everybody. Supply and demand create a market. The man who has an article which he has no further use for, with the assistance of a little want ad, can find readily the other man who is looking for just that article. On the other hand the man who is looking for some particular article can find the man who has it and who it perhaps has not occurred that he can sell it, thus by means of the want ad purchasers and sellers for small articles get together.

Albany, N. Y., July 12.—The assembly passed the Wagner resolution today approving the federal income tax amendment to the constitution by a vote of 91 to 42. This binds New York state to the amendment.

THE SUGAR TRUST INQUIRY WILL BE RESUMED NEXT WEEK

Washington, July 12.—The congressional investigation of the American Sugar Refining Company will be transferred from Washington to New York next week. The House committee of inquiry into the so-called sugar trust will sit in New York, beginning next Tuesday and the session there will continue throughout the week.

Among the witnesses already subponaed to appear before the committee in New York are John Arbuckle, head of the Arbuckle Brothers, a competitor of the "trust," John E. Parsons, former counsel of the American Sugar Refining Company, and Washington B. Thomas, vice-president of the American Sugar Refining Company.

The committee will hear probably next Thursday, Milton T. Purdy, of Minneapolis, former assistant attorney general, who, while acting as attorney general of the United States expressed a purpose to prosecute "sugar trust" officials in connection with the Pennsylvania sugar refinery absorptions in 1903. George H. Earle, Jr., of Philadelphia, charged before the committee recently that former President Roosevelt did not act in accordance with Purdy's expressed purpose. This phase may be inquired into in New York.

A deathbed affidavit of Justav E. Kissel, of New York, indicted jointly with former officers of the American Sugar Refining Company on the charge of conspiracy to restrain trade through the absorption of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company in 1903 was introduced in evidence yesterday before the House sugar trust committee.

The affidavit, never before made public, was submitted by T. S. Fuller, counsel for the sugar trust, upon request of Wm. B. Guthrie, Kissel's attorney and members of Kissel's family.

Kissell's statement was that he had expressed a desire to testify under oath before the federal grand jury regarding his connection with the $1,250,000 loan made by the American Sugar Refining Company through him to Adolph Segal, of Philadelphia, on which transaction Kissell's indictment was based but that he had been indicted before he had an opportunity to testify.

Conscious of his "dangerous" illness Kissell made this declaration:

"The charge made in the indictment that I entered into an unlawful conspiracy with the directors of the American company and the defendant Harned, or anybody else, in any way or form, is untrue, and the allegations that I deceived Mr. Segal at any time or in any way, and that I wrongfully and unlawfully endeavored to injure him financially and to hinder his paying his debts and to prevent the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company from engaging in business, are without foundation or support in the facts and directly in conflict with the truth. I did everything in my power in good faith to assist him financially and to help him pay off the loan and start the refinery, and my financial interests were at all times with him and not with the American Company."

Kissell admitted voting to close down the Pennsylvania sugar refinery because it required too much money to operate.

A quiet home wedding, but one that nevertheless holds great interest for society here and throughout the State will be performed this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock when Miss Carrie Jacobs and Prof. Walter Baumhoefener, of St. Paul, Minn., will be united in marriage. The ceremony will occur at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Jacobs, 245 Bellemeade street. Only a few near relatives and intimate friends of the couple will be present.

Miss Jacobs was the guest of honor at a delightful reception given yesterday by the Misses Dodson at their home on North Summit street, Winston. The contracting couple of the wedding today and several members of the bridal party were among the large number of invited guests. Prof. and Mrs. Martin Lochner, Misses Berta and Minnie Jacobs, sisters of the bride, and Victor Baumhoefener, brother of the groom, were among those who enjoyed the hospitality of their charming hostesses.

Davidson-Murray.

At Midway Presbyterian church, four miles east of Greensboro, a beautiful marriage was solemnized yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock when Miss Pauline Elizabeth Murray became the bride of Mr. Dwight Merrimon Davidson, of Gibsonville.

For the ceremony beautiful decorations were provided. These consisted of festoons of ivy, banks of palms and ferns, a huge arch from the center of which was suspended a lovely flower bell and potted and cut flowers beautifully arranged.

Before the ceremony Mr. Ed Clapp sang with great feeling "O Perfect Love." Miss Florine Robertson of Burlington presided at the piano and was accompanied by Mr. Will Huff of Gibsonville on the clarionet. The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was played as the party entered as follows: The ushers, Messrs. Carl Sellars, George Foushee, Louie Asheley and Herbert Ogburn, all of Greensboro; the dame of honor, Mrs. S. E. Tate of Mebane, sister of the bride; the ring-bearers, little Irene Richmond and Murray Tate of Mebane; the maid of honor, Miss Cora Donnell, of Greensboro; the bride with her brother-in-law, Mr. S. E. Tate, and from the right wing of the church the groom came attended by his best man, his brother, Prof. G. C. Davidson, of Fayetteville. The bride and groom met under the arch and were met by the minister, Rev. J. W. Goodman, who using the ring ceremony made them man and wife, while the plaintive notes of "La Priere" came from the piano and clarionet. To Mendelssohn's joyous strains the party left the church and were driven to the station and left at once for the western part of the state to spend a ten days' honeymoon among the mountains. They will be at home at Gibsonville after July 25.

The bride was charmingly gowned in a traveling suit of champagne, hat and gloves to match and carried Bride roses. The ladies in waiting wore white batiste and black picture hats and carried pink sweet peas. The bride's only ornament was a pearl bracelet, the gift of the groom, an heirloom in the Davidson family.

Miss Murray is one of Guilford's fairest daughters and is loved wherever known. She is the daughter of Mr. A. H. Murray, and for the past two years has been a teacher.

Mr. Davidson is the son of Mr. Berry Davidson of Gibsonville, one of this section's greatest cotton manufacturers, who has lately retired. He was the founder and builder of the two large mills at Gibsonville, besides being one of the founders of Alamance's largest mills. The young groom is following in his father's steps, as he is the bookkeeper in one of these mills. He is a most excellent young man of high character, business ability and great popularity among his associates.

Several ante-nuptial events were given in honor of the bride-elect, Miss Virginia Townsend giving a linen shower the afternoon of July 6, and Miss Cora Donnell a promiscuous shower July 8. A reception was given the bridal party at the home of the bride Tuesday night, following the rehearsal for the wedding.

MANY RESPONDED TO SCREAMS OF INJURED WHISTLE

The engine pulling train No. 31 came to the Southern passenger station about 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning with the steam whistle screaming at a terrific rate. The noise started several miles north of the city when the valve of the tooter broke and the steam pouring through emitted a loud and weird screech. All who were on the streets or abroad at that hour and many who were peacefully sleeping at their homes were awakened and alarmed by the continual clamor, many of them rushing to their doors and the streets to find the fire as the engine whistles are frequently used in the event of a conflagration. The most distressing scene of the accidental affair came however, when the guests at the Hotel Huffine, panic stricken by nearness and volume of the din, piled out of their beds helter-skelter and rushed to the ground, none of them, to break the news gently, clad in dress suits or evening gowns. The prevailing costumes were pink, blue and white clothing used in the "wee, sma' hours" of the morning. After saving themselves from the apprehended danger and viewing the assemblage standing so immodestly in a public place an even worse scamper was created by men, women, and children in the flight for the safety of their rooms. As for the whistle that started the excitement to say nothing of the fun, it could not be quieted although all possible methods were tried to pacify it, even to stuffing sacks and rags and all available trash in the break. These were blown out faster than they could be put in and the train finally left for the shops at Spencer to repair the damage, no doubt creating considerable excitement all along the route. All due sympathy is extended to the passengers who were forced to ride the train and the sleepers at the hotel who for a short time at least were certainly the "observed of all observers" and were "cast quite, quiet down" with humiliation on account of their prompt response to a false alarm.

W. H. Slater Died Yesterday Morning

W. H. Slater died yesterday morning at 3 o'clock at the home of his mother in Washington. Tuberculosis claimed the victim after a lingering illness that was attended by much suffering.

The body of the unfortunate young man, accompanied by the mother and two sisters, the only survivors in the immediate family, passed through the city last night, enroute to Durham, where the deceased formerly resided and where the funeral will be held this morning. C. C. Collins will attend the funeral and return to the city in the latter part of the day.

Mr. Slater, during his residence here, was a very popular young man. He was 28 years of age at his death and had made many friends in Greensboro though in the city for only a year. About two years ago he was forced to resign from active work and toured the west in a vain attempt to find relief from his sufferings. His mother receiving word of his critical illness about two weeks past, joined him at his bedside in Hot Springs, Ark., where he was undergoing treatment. After a slight improvement he was taken back to Washington and gradually became more feeble until death at last relieved his pain.

HIS HASTY LUNCH

By Mabel Claire Smith

Sam Elwood was a very big, very bashful and very good looking young fellow of perhaps twenty-three years. He lived with his father and mother on a Missouri farm and, since a paralytic stroke had permanently disabled the elder man two years before, the work of the 200-acre place had fallen into Sam's capable hands. The one thing Sam feared was a girl.

"If any girl wants Sam she'll have to do the courting," Mrs. Elwood once remarked, unaware that the youth in question was within earshot. Sam'd never in this world screw his courage to the popping point."

This assertion was so true that Sam's ears tingled whenever he thought of it. It had grown to be a very sensitive matter by the time a distant connection of the family came to visit at the farm.

When he heard that the visitor was a young lady he groaned in anguish of mind. He planned to keep out of her way as much as was possible, eating his breakfast from the pantry shelves, taking his dinner to the field with him and skirmishing for his supper. He didn't know just how he could avoid sitting at table with her on Sunday. He thought seriously of staying in bed all of Sunday. The one objection to that was the extra trouble it would cause his mother. She would not understand his indisposition when he had never been ill since his babyhood. Still, if nothing better occurred, Sam resolved to have a headache the first Sunday, at least.

"Sammy, it's a shame you act so unsociable," remonstrated his mother, at the end of the first week when the only glimpse of himself Sam had permitted the guest was two inches of vanishing coattails, out of the kitchen door ,the third morning after her arrival.

"Virginia Dare is a mighty nice girl without a speck of harm in her whole little body. She helps me about the housework and rubs your pa's back and chirks him up as if she was an own daughter. I wish you could get acquainted with her, Sammy. She talks real pleasant about you."

"Shucks!" muttered Sam, his ears tingling familiarly as he grabbed a paper bag of small cakes from the pantry shelf and fled upstairs, a light step outside the kitchen door having warned him of the need of haste in his supper raid. "Got to fill up the hollows with cookies tonight, I guess," he sighed, when the door was safely shut and he was gingerly examining the unusually tidy appearance of his room. "Ma's getting real fancy in her old age," he commented, staring respectfully at the crisp white curtain tied back with rose-patterned ribbon at both sides of the window.

"The bed's punched up some, too," he went on, as he turned back the covers. "Jiminy! Clean sheets and pillow cases when I haven't had them on more'n a week! Ma certainly is getting fixy. I guess I'd better scrub up some to match the other clean things. Lucky ma remembered to put some towels in here. Blessed if she didn't fill up the water pitcher, too! I'll have to tell her not to do that any more. I'm plenty able to pack up my own wash water. Ma's got enough work to do waiting on pa and that girl without wearing herself to frazzles looking after me."

Shaking his curly brown head reprovingly, Sammy made his toilet and, attired in a frilled night dress which his mother had made for him with her own fingers and which he wore sorely against his wishes merely to avoid hurting the good woman's feelings, seated himself on the edge of the bed and began to consume his cakes.

He crunched and munched away for several minutes before he noticed anything peculiar about the cakes. He had swallowed three of them and was trying to masticate the fourth. Someway, that fourth cake did not appeal to him. None of them were good, but Sam had made allowances for his mother's forgetfulness about putting in sugar, or baking powder, or salt more than once before, so he had crunched away with cheerful resignation on these.

"Jiminy!" muttered Sam, hastily putting the uneaten cakes on the nearby stand. "I feel as if I'd been eating soap and meal; flavored with beer! What in time made ma bake cookies like those? Ah-h-! I'm feeling awful queer—sort of sick and puffed up and funny all over! Jiminy! I'd give a dollar if I dared sneak down to ma's room and ask her for something to take. That girl sleeps right across the hall from ma, though. She'd see me sure as fate. Ah-h! I'm sicker-er ev-ery minute!"

By this time Sam was rolling about in his bed, groaning with pain and nausea. His head was hot and his feet and hands were cold. He could not get up for the swimming sensation in his head, and all he could do to help himself was to groan and toss from one side to the other.

In the intervals of his groaning spells he thought he heard some one moving quickly about in his parents' room just beneath his. He wondered if his mother had heard him and was coming to his relief. In anguish of body and mind he strained his ears to catch the sound of approaching steps.

"Come in," he called, weakly, when the longed-for knock sounded on the door. "Do hurry, for mercy's sake!"

The door swung slowly open, as if the knocker was strangely reluctant to enter. A figure, rather hastily arrayed in a blue kimono sprigged with roses, her hair hanging in two thick yellow braids down her back and her feet encased in small blue velvet slippers, stood on the threshold, a candle in one white hand and a bottle and spoon in the other.

"Oh," she exclaimed, the color rushing over her small, flower-like face as she met Sam's horrified stare. "Your mother was called to sit up with a sick neighbor an hour ago, and your father called me a minute ago to see what was the trouble with you. He said he had heard you groaning and tumbling around for some time, and he feared you were ill. Y-you know your father is confined to his bed, so he could not come up here himself. Oh, you are ill, I'm sure!" she cried, a quick change coming over her as she noticed for the first time since her arrival the glassiness of his eyes and the scarlet flush in his face. "Let me feel your pulse!"

In a few swift steps she reached the bed and placed her cool fingers for a brief space on his brawny wrist. Next she felt the clamminess of his hands and the heat of his head, her manner growing more and more concerned.

"What have you been eating?" she presently asked, taking up the paper sack and examining the contents. "Mercy on us!" she gasped, looking wonderingly toward the patient. "Surely you knew better than to eat yeast cakes!"

"Yeast cakes!" thickly muttered Sam, in astonishment. "I thought they were funny. Sure to rise, I guess," he added, with a forlorn attempt at a joke.

The girl said no more. Her energies were occupied in dosing the patient with mustard and warm water, applying hot water bottles to his feet and an ice water bag to his head.

At the end of a strenuous hour Sam was resting much better and his nurse felt safe in leaving him for the remainder of the night.

What Sam's experience taught him, during the time he lay there, tormented with pain, watching the sympathetic face of the zealous little nurse as she flew in and out of the room with hot water, mustard, and one thing and another for his betterment, was evinced by his conduct toward the young visitor during the remained of her stay.

"Looks mighty like Sam was sprucing up like other fellows, ma," remarked Sam's father, after his son had spent 15 minutes before the hall mirror in a vain endeavor to get his tie to suit him. "I don't know but what he'll be plenty able to do his own courting by the time Virginia comes again."

And Sam, with tingling ears, stoutly intimated his opinion that he would.

ANCIENT TOOTHACHE CURES

Treatments Used by the Old Romans In Curing and Preventing Such Ills.

If it be true that ancient remedies are always the best, it may be of interest to those afflicted with dental troubles to know how the ancient Romans dealt with such ills. The Quirites recognized two types of treatment, the magical and the medical. The following—we quite the Hospital—are some of the prescriptions advised by the magicians: Take the head of a dog that has died of rabies, mix the ash with oil of cyprus and inject the product into the ear of the affected side. A water snake's vertebrae will serve to scarify the gum provided that it be obtained from a white-skinned snake. Or for the same purpose may be used a lizard's frontal bone obtained when the moon is full, or, if that fail, a chicken bone will do, provided that it be dried in a hole in the wall and thrown away immediately after use. It is good treatment to inject into the ear oil of lemon, in which has been macerated either mallow bugs or sparrow's dung, even should this last give rise to itching. A worm fed on a particular herb or a cabbage caterpillar can conveniently be placed in a hollow tooth, but it is equally simple to chew an adder's heart. Prevention being better than cure, a sovereign preventive will be found in the eating of two rats a month.

COW'S HORN NURSING BOTTLE

Description of Old-Time Baby Raising That Will Make Modern Mother Shudder.

The original nursing bottle was a cow's horn, to the small end of which were sewn two pieces of leather, as a finger of a glove, and the infant drew its nourishment between the stitches. According to Dr. D. Forsyth, fifteenth century mothers used to nurse their babies for close upon three years, a duration still customary among the Japanese and Greenlanders. In the time of the Stuarts it had declined to between eighteen months and two years. In the time of the Georges it fell to one year, and now he reckoned the average as eight months.

During the Hanoverian period the practice of feeding babies artificially became somewhat common. Cow's milk was not then considered just the food for a baby deprived of its mother's milk, and the substance called "pap" was introduced through the cow's horn. "Pap" was a mixture of crust, water and sugar. A baby that thrived on it was usually one of rare constitution.

The nursing bottle with a long rubber stem succeeded the cow's horn, and by degrees the comparatively sanitary feeding bottle of today was introduced.

CARICATURES ON THE STAGE

Appeal to Playwrights to Make Their Characters a Little More True to Nature.

At the anniversary festival of the Royal General Theatrical Fund J. L. Griffiths, United States consul general, spoke a word of appeal for some improvements in the drama. He would like, he said, to see a play in which there was a really spiritual clergyman, an honest barrister, a straightforward diplomatist and an American gentleman. Mr. Griffiths' views have been generally indorsed by the press.

It is acknowledged that diplomatists are presented on the stage too consistently as creatures of preternatural cunning, never as men with human limitations. The popular dramatic type of clergyman, the muscular, is more tiring still; every curate is not the physical equal of a prizefighter. An American gentleman would be very welcome on the English stage. The type almost invariably presented is like nothing on earth. He is neither a gentleman nor an American. It is true he no longer ejaculates "By gosh!" or "I calculate," but he continues to be a caricature, and a bad caricature at that.

Naming the Gerrymander.

The gerrymander was christened in 1813, although it must have been in operation long before that. A stanch old Federalist, Gov. Elbridge Gerry, controlled through his legislature the redistricting of Massachusetts under the census of 1810.

In the office of Benjamin Russell, an ardent Republican editor, hung a map of the state as newly subdivided by Gerry and his men. Gilbert Stuart's ready pencil whimsically added to the outlines of a grotesque district the wings and tail of a dragon.

"Ha!" he said when he had finished. "How's that for a salamander?"

The Republican Russell growled: "Petter call it a Gerrymander." And American politicians have taken his advice.—The Independent.

Catching Speed.

Two wild-eyed horses wearing dilapidated harness and drawing a battered delivery wagon stopped at the stable door.

"Just had a runaway," panted the driver.

"Then for Heaven's sake don't put those horses in with the other horses that will soon go out on a trip," said the head hostler. "If you do, they'll run away too. They always do. Before I learned as much about horses as I know now, I brought on a dozen runaways by doing that fool trick. The horses that have just been on a spree are still worked up to fever pitch, the rest of the horses catch the spirit of the devil from them, and as soon as they get out they take a header."

Originator of Mothers' Day.

Mrs. Anna M. Jarvis, the originator of mothers' day, is said to be a typical Quakeress of the old school. Her object in having one day in each year set apart for mothers is because of her gratitude to her own mother. The second Sunday in May has been selected as mothers' day, and men and women throughout the country have pledged themselves to observe it. According to the ideas of Mrs. Jarvis those who have a mother will devote that one day to making her happy, those whose mothers are no longer on this earth will try to add to the happiness of some woman whose children have passed away.

The Test.

Madge—I refused Jack eight times before finally saying "yes."

Ethel—Why did you change your mind?

Madge—I didn't. I was merely seeing if he would change his.

Persevering.

Patient—Say! that isn't the tooth I want pulled.

Dentist—Never mind. I'm coming to it.

LORIMER COMMITTEE IN SESSION AGAIN TODAY IN WASHINGTON

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 12.—The Lorimer investigating committee will resume its sittings here tomorrow. It was originally thought that the committee would continue its hearings either in Chicago or Springfield, but that plan was abandoned for several reasons. The members of the committee are disinclined to go on junketing trips if it can be avoided, and have deemed that it would be better to bring witnesses here for examination than to go to Illinois and hear them. Then, too, there is the belief that the reciprocity and tariff situation may break at any time in the Senate, and members desire to be here prepared to vote on these measures if the opportunity comes.

During the past two weeks that the committee has been in recess, the attorneys for the committee, Messrs. Marble and Healy, have been diligently searching after new evidence, and devising means either to substantiate, verify or disprove and discredit the story told by Edward Hanes, the Chicago millionaire lumberman and backer of Senator Lorimer. Scores of suggestions and communications containing advice have come to the attorneys and some of the "tips" have been followed, particularly where it was believed that new evidence might be developed, but both Mr. Marble and Mr. Healy have declined to state whether or not they have found anything new, or what their line of procedure will be.

Up to the present time, the investigation has scarcely touched upon the question of vote buying and bribery in the Illinois legislature. There have been references to the much discussed "jack pot," but the evidence had little bearing with respect to what influence, if any, the alleged use of money had upon the election of Senator Lorimer. Hines rather than Lorimer, has been the central figure in the investigation thus far, and generally the testimony has had to do with his alleged boasts that he personally was responsible for the election of Senator Lorimer, acting at the request of Senator Aldrich and the President. There has been a great deal of talk about the $100,000 Lorimer fund, but the committee has been unable to get any tangible evidence to show that it existed. The testimony on this point and the matters connected with it have been so contradictory, that the committee finds itself unable to reach any conclusion upon it, unless it should find some collateral evidence. Whether or not this will be obtainable is something which is not disclosed. Up to the present time the evidence with regard to this fund has been so vague and unsatisfactory that unless there is some further light thrown upon the matter by subsequent testimony, it is not likely to play an important part in the committee's report. If it existed, which is denied, it has not yet been connected with Lorimer's election.

Much of the testimony already adduced came out before the Helm investigating committee of the Illinois Senate, and it is said that the fact will be shown later on in the investigation that the Hines-Funk conversation with regard to the fund which Funk avers and Hines denies, was known to Managing Editor Keely of the Chicago Tribune and others at the time of the first investigation, as it was known to Editor Kohlsaat, but that it was not deemed of sufficient importance to bring to the attention of the committee which made the original inquiry.

The committee expects, as far as possible to follow up this matter to the end that some definite conclusion may be reached with regard to it. Then it will also go over again the matter of the confessions of the alleged bribe takers and alleged bribe givers. Much interest is likely to be aroused over the testimony of these witnesses, notwithstanding the fact that their stories have been repeatedly told. The cross examination of these witnesses will be most thorough, and Senators who are not members of the committee have expressed their intention of attending the hearings for the purpose of sizing up these witnesses on the stand and, forming their own estimate of these men.

How far the committee will go in the matter of summoning members of the Illinois State Legislature, whose names are not connected with the bribe giving and bribe taking, is not announced, but as it is the intention of the committee to probe to the bottom, any man whose name is in the most remote way connected with the matter will be summoned to appear and testify. Some of these may be able to throw light upon the present tangled condition of the investigation.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

YESTERDAY'S DOINGS IN MUNICIPAL COURT

The fine of $30 and the costs which was imposed Tuesday upon Will Hemphill for an affray with deadly weapons with Charlie Black, was changed yesterday in Municipal Court to a sentence of 90 days on the city streets. The negro started yesterday to work out his term, and Black was released yesterday on bond for his appearance in Superior Court next September. He is very sick and can neither work on the streets nor pay his fine, and will contest the case further on appeal to the higher court.

Another installment of seven automobile drivers yesterday faced the charge of running cars at night without a rear light. Charles Thacker, J. J. Schlosser, Jno. Reitzell, W. A. Watson, Dr. J. E. Dellinger, Dr. Farran Jarboe, and J. H. Camden were the defendants in the cases. The first six were dismissed with warnings and the latter was taxed with a fine of the costs for the offense.

Frank Hudson, a young white boy, was fined $5 and the costs for overspeeding the limits allowed by the laws of the city.

J. W. Brady was fined the costs of the case for obstructing the sidewalk.

E. S. Turner, a negro, for carrying concealed weapons was given a term of three months on the city streets.

Frank Frees, a negro youth, received a street sentence of nine months for larceny.

HANDICAPPED

This is the Case With Many Greensboro People.

Too many Greensboro citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and stooping or lifting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief, but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills help sick kidneys.

The following statement should convince every Greensboro reader of their efficiency.

F. C. Remfry, 512 S. Main St., High Point, N. C., says: "I was in such a miserable condition with kidney trouble that I did not believe there was any cure for me. My back and limbs were so sore that I could not get up after sitting without assistance and it was impossible for me to go about easily. The kidney secretions were also scanty and highly colored. I doctored and took medicine faithfully, but I did not improve. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills and the contents of three boxes made a permanent cure."

A. H. ELLER ON SIMMONS AND THE LUMBER TARIFF

Democratic Executive Committee Chairman Explodes Senator Simmons' Theory in Regard to Release From Obligation to Support The National Platform.

Winston-Salem, July 12.—Following close upon the heels of the statements made on the floor of the United States Senate by Senator Simmons, that on the question of free lumber he was relieved from the obligation of the national platform by reason of a letter issued by his State executive committee, A. H. Eller, chairman of the committee, has issued a statement to the press of North Carolina denying that the letter in question afforded any ground for the Senator's position in voting for a duty on lumber.

Points at Issue.

Senator Simmons made the point that the circular letter qualified the lumber plank in the national platform and relieved all the congressional candidates in this State from its obligation, on the ground that the declaration would endanger Democratic control of the State. Chairman Eller not only denies that the letter issued by the committee was any qualification of the national platform, but further says that Senator Simmons' speech in the Senate was the first suggestion he had heard of danger to the party, or that the national platform should be departed from. On the contrary, Chairman Eller declares that the letter was a strong argument for free lumber. He says that Senator Simmons had heretofore referred in similar vein to this circular letter, but he had deemed it unnecessary to defend the committee from the insinuations until they had been given the wide publicity incident to their utterance on the floor of the United States Senate.

Chairman Eller's Letter.

"There has appeared a report of Senator Simmons' speech in which his defense of his attitude on lumber is based on what he terms 'Chairman Eller's pledge.' He is reported as saying: 'After the adoption of the Denver platform the people of North Carolina rebelled against that declaration of the Democratic party to such an extent as to make it manifest to the chairman of the Democratic executive committee of that State (Mr. Eller) that we were in danger of losing the control of the State as the result of that declaration.'

"This is the first time that Senator Simmons, Mr. Maxwell, or any other person ever suggested such danger to me and it is the first time that such a thought ever entered my mind. I deny that this article referred to, which appeared in a supplement on October 29, 1908, was intended by me to qualify the declaration of the party in its national platform. This document has been referred to by Senator Simmons once or twice before, but I had deemed it unnecessary to refer to this subject in North Carolina as I have had no reason to believe that the chairman of the State Democratic executive committee is thought to be untrue to the platform of his party, or tainted with the Republican doctrine of protection. Since, however, a partial extract of this article has been injected into national politics because of the prominence of our distinguished Senator, and the wide reach of the forum from which he speaks, it seems proper that the facts should be better understood.

"During the campaign of 1908 I was assisted by A. J. Maxwell as manager of the literary bureau. He was a newspaper man of experience, but was at that time engaged in the lumber business. He was, as I understood him, in perfect sympathy and accord with the national Democratic platform. Senator Simmons was several times at Democratic headquarters. Together these gentlemen discussed in my presence the lumber question, stating the strongest arguments against protection on lumber and in support of the Democratic position, but at no time was it suggested that the party was in danger or that the national Democratic platform should be departed from. I did not have the time, nor did I deem it necessary to read all of the many excellent articles written by Mr. Maxwell. I directed him to republish in this supplement the letter of Charles Ross, a manufacturer of lumber, and the language referred to by Senator Simmons is found in Mr. Maxwell's introductory remarks to this letter. I do not call reading more than the headlines which were full and comprehensive and are as follows:

"'LUMBER MEN WILL VOTE FOR BRYAN

PRODUCERS OF SOUTHERN PINE ARE NOT BENEFITTED BY THE SMALL TARIFF ON LUMBER.'"

"'A complete and effective refutation of the argument of the Republicans by one of North Carolina's foremost lumbermen.'"

"'The truth is the South's two chief products, cotton and lumber, cannot be protected by the tariff, since we produce a surplus of both. The only foreign lumber that can compete with us in this territory is Canada. Canada has no lumber that comes in competition with our yellow pine.'" The protected trusts add immensely to the cost of producing lumber. The Democrats will relieve them of this burden, while the tariff on lumber will be taken off by either party that headswins.

"I quote here also one of the subheads and paragraphs written by Mr. Maxwell, viz:

"'TARIFF NO BENEFIT TO SOUTHERN LUMBER.'"

"'But back to the original point. Is the small tariff of $2 per thousand on rough boards any real protection to the manufacturers of pine lumber in the South? This writer, after serious consideration of the question, thinks not. Certainly it has been ineffectual to save their business from the most disastrous fall in prices during the last eighteen months. The low price of lumber, as every manufacturer must know, has been due to competition among themselves and not to competition with foreign lumber.'

"After Senator Simmons' vote on the lumber schedule of the Payne-Aldrich bill, Mr. Maxwell published a letter in the newspapers in support of Senator Simmons' position and calling attention to the particular clause of half sentence in the article which he had written. I give here the subhead and the full sentence:

"'DIFFERENCE IN POSITNON OF THE TWO PARTIES.'"

"'The chief difference which lumbermen may expect from the two parties on this question is that the Republicans would put lumber on the free list as demanded by its President, but that the lumbermen could expect little relief at the hands of the Republicans from the exactions of the trusts of the country which go to make the manufacture of lumber so expensive, while they may rest assured that the Democrats would not put lumber on the free list, it being a Southern product, unless there should be coupled with it the placing upon the free list of all articles entering into competition with trust-controlled articles as their platform demands, and which would tend to largely cheapen the expense of the manufacturer of lumber.'

"What I submit is a correct interpretation of this sentence: If the Republican party should have the making of the new tariff, free lumber but protected machinery might be expected. If the Democratic party should have the making of the new tariff, free lumber and free machinery might be expected.

The subhead to this sentence: "'Difference in position of the two parties,'" points out what the writer is trying to say. No promise is made the people unless the Democrats win and write the tariff. What individual Democrats will do, if the Republicans win, was not thought of. The article as a whole is a powerful argument against protection on lumber. But I am sending you this article in its entirety, headlines and all, well assured that the more publicity is given to it as a whole, the less we shall hear about it as a protection document.

Honest Medicines Versus Fakes.

President Taft's recent message suggesting an amendment to the Pure Food and Drugs law in its relation to Prepared Medicines, does not refer to such standard medicines as Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and Foley's Kidney Pills, both of which are true medicines carefully compounded of ingredients whose medicinal qualities are recognized by the medical profession itself as the best known remedial agents for the diseases they are intended to counteract. For over three decades Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has been a standard remedy for coughs, colds and affections of the throat, chest and lungs for children and for grown persons, and it retains today its pre-eminence above all other preparations of its kind. Foley Kidney Pills are equally effective and meritorious. Howard Gardner.

ANDERSON FAILED TO BAT ELDRIDGE

Electricians Couldn't Connect With Rube's Delivery And Result Was Pretty Victory For Greensboro—Game Was Snappy And Fine Exhibition of Ball Playing.

Eldridge had the Electricians completely at his mercy yesterday and but four hits of consequence were tallied, there being in addition one measley scratch. He did not give a single pass and at no time except in the sixth when a single and a triple was secured was the home plate in danger. In fact not a single man reached the second sack after this frame and but one had gotten that far prior to this time, this being in the first when W. Kelly doubled. He was given perfect support and several fine fielding stunts were pulled off. The only error by the Patriots was a fumble by Doak in the ninth, but the man never left the initial sack.

Jim Kelly's bunch also did some fine work and several pegs to second caught the thieving Patriots. The boys could not solve Rube's curves and the hits were not forthcoming at the proper time. Two of the errors by the Kellyites contributed to the run-making by allowing a couple of runs. Doak was the only man who purloined the second station.

W. Kelly, the first man to face Rube, slammed out one good for two sacks. The next two went out to left field and third respectively. J. Kelly then hit to short and Kelly, W., was caught at third. When the Patriots marched up Rickard went out to center, while Doyle secured free transporation. Fuller sacrificed him to second and Doak scored him on a single. Clapp followed with a single, but was thrown out trying to steal second. In the second frame Lowman flew out to Kelly in right. Carroll singled and Stewart walked. Eldridge singled and filled the bases. Rickard sent one through second and Carroll and Stewart scored, Ware, who ran for Eldridge, and Rickard advanced a base on a wild pitch and Ware came home when no effort was made to recover the ball. However, the runners were sent to third and second respectively as the sphere touched the grand stand fence. They died on these bases.

In the sixth McCoy, Anderson's first man up, went out third to first. Taylor singled. Kelly flew out to center. Yount drove a three-bagger into left field and Taylor crossed the rubber. Fogarty hit to Loman and the frame was over.

In the eighth the Patriots added two other tallies to their score. Fuller flew out to first. Doak was safe on error of third and stole second. Clapp flew out to left. Loman singled and Doak scored. Carroll was safe on error of short and Loman advanced to third, Carroll going to second. Stewart singled and Loman scored. Carroll in scurrying around the bases failed to touch third and was called out.

CHARLOTTE AND GREENVILLE TIED UP FINAL GAME

Greenville, S. C., July 12.—An error followed by an injured base-runner got Bauswine up in the air in the first inning and eight runs were made before Van Pelt settled down. The game was called at 6.10 to allow the teams to catch trains and at six o'clock in the seventh inning the Hornets tied the score off Cashion's one bad inning.

Left-fielder Blackstone, the star Greenville player, dislocated and fractured his ankle sliding to second in the first inning. He will be out of the game for the rest of the season. Outfielder Taguer or Brown, from Charleston, will be secured if possible.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
Greenville	503 000 00—8	11	4
Charlotte	100 020 50—8	8	3

Batteries—Cashion and Kite; Bauswine, Van Pelt and Malcolmson. Umpires Leibrich, Ridgeway, of Greenville, and Hankie, of Charlotte.

SWINDELL WAS TOO MUCH FOR THE MUSICIANS

Spartanburg, S. C., July 12.—Too much Swindell in the game today took the last of the series to the locals, 2 to 0. Only 19 men faced Swindell in the first six frames, the extra man being given the one base on balls issued by Swindell. A base on balls, an error and a single scored for the Twins in the first. By the same men a pass, a sacrifice and a single in the fifth gave the visitors prettiest game seen on the local diamond this season.

DIAMOND DUST

Greenville here today.

Why aren't you attending the games?

The actual attendance yesterday was less than 200.

No town deserves a winning ball team that doesn't support it.

Dick Smith will bring his bunch of losing Spinners here today for three games.

Greensboro is a little nearer the top than it was a week ago.

Reuben has a way of coming back and evening up after his bad days.

Why not let the Spartans play the Twins for the rest of the season?

The Chronicle says we should frame up a Chromo and send it to Bill Laval.

No reason why we shouldn't have all three of these games with Dick Smith's bunch.

Hope Anderson will do for the Twins what the Musicians have done.

We are certainly under obligations to Billy Laval and his men for their valiant work this week.

It is time for Greensboro fans to get behind the team and give it loyal support and a big attendance.

A Family Reunion.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Landreth are holding a reunion at their old home, about two miles east of the city. C. W. Landreth, of Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Landreth, and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Stanley, with several of the younger children who are still at home have gathered together for the first time in years and through the last half of the week they are planning numerous expeditions for pleasure. From an early hour today a fishing trip and picnic will be held at Donnell's pond, and various other amusements will be entered into by the reunited family.

Seven Baptized.

At the regular midweek prayer service at the Christian church last evening the rites of the baptism were administered to seven persons.
